

Angela Gribben

Angela is an experienced manager and consultant. She has a good understanding of the issues, challenges and complexities of the voluntary sector in general and the Violence against Women Sector in particular. She has a high level of skills and experience in managing change in organisations and brings a mature, empathetic and collaborative but results orientated approach to what is almost always a challenging process for those involved. Angela is a highly committed, organised professional. She has excellent communication skills and a high level of technical skills. Angela is skilled in providing individual and group interventions. In testimony to her delivery, clients tend to continue their relationship with Angela after she has delivered significant pieces of work, and she continues to dip in and out of these organisations delivering support as required.

Key areas of expertise include:

- Governance in Scottish charities
- Change management and organisational development
- Research and evaluation
- Training and facilitation
- Mentoring and coaching

Relevant Qualifications

BA Social Science
SVQ 5 Strategic Management
SVQ 4 Operational Management

Resume of Recent Experience:

Facilitating development days
Supporting Trustees to develop strategic plans
Working with Senior Managers to help them develop operational plans
Providing training on the role of the Trustee in Scottish Charities
Providing a range of business skills and personal effectiveness training to managers and front line staff
Creating working partnerships for a pilot project for an organisation
Providing one to one coaching and mentoring for Trustees and Managers
Evaluating services for interim reports and end of project reports to funders