Miles works in organisation development and is an independent meeting facilitator. He has particular expertise and experience in the not-for-profit cultural sector in: leadership development; managing change; governance (board development); business planning; and strategic thinking.

He designs and runs bespoke leadership development and governance development workshops and training events.

He previously worked for the leadership development organisation Common Purpose as Programme Director. He moved to Scotland in the summer of 1998 and began work for the Scottish Arts Council as Senior Development Officer (National Lottery). In April 2000 he became the manager of the SAC Lottery funded Advancement Programme - a scheme to help organisations achieve lasting positive change.

Miles is a trained and qualified Action Learning Set facilitator.

He is chair of the board Birds of Paradise Theatre Company, board member of Craft Scotland and was chair of the macrobert arts centre in Stirling
